Cairn International Edition - A Quick Overview

Founded in September 2005 by four Belgian and French publishers, Cairn.info offers the most comprehensive online collection of French language publications in the humanities and social sciences. As of 2015, it contains four hundred journals and four thousand eBooks from major French, Belgian and Swiss publishers. On www.cairn.info, students, scholars and librarians from all over the world can access three hundred thousand full-text articles and book chapters.

While Cairn.info’s content is originally published in the French language, it is not limited to it. Around 50,000 abstracts and over 3,000 full-text articles in English are currently available on Cairn.info, either originally published in English or translated from French.

To make this content more visible and accessible to the English-speaking world, Cairn.info (with the support of the CNL, a French governmental agency dedicated to the promotion of French publications around the world) has designed an English-language interface enabling Internet users to browse and easily find content from French journals without speaking a word of French: www.cairn-int.info.

Cairn International Edition’s Homepage

Cairn International Editon’s homepage highlights recently added issues of the journals that are fully or partly available in English, in addition to the corresponding French version that will still appear on Cairn.info. This homepage also showcases recent articles from French journals that are fully available in English.
Translators of Outstanding Articles Published in French Journals

To increase the number of articles with full-text in English, Cairn.info and its public partner, the CNL, asked some French journals to select outstanding and representative articles they have published in the last ten years.

These articles were translated by native English speakers who are also subject specialists (humanities and social sciences). They are now available to international scholars through www.cairn-int.info.
Tables of Contents in English

For each journal available on Cairn International Edition, all current issues are listed and their tables of contents can be browsed freely in English. For all issues, users can access revised abstracts in English and when available full-text versions in English and/or in French. A direct link allows users to view all full-text articles in English for the same journal.

CAIRN INTERNATIONAL EDITION’s search engine was purposely designed to enable users to search in abstracts and, where possible, in articles with English full-text. However, it is always possible, in the event that no results are found in English, to extend the search to content available in French.
Articles in HTML format

Articles on Cairn International Edition can be downloaded in PDF format to enable users to save and access them on their own device.

They are also available in a specially designed HTML format, with links to further information on the same author, on the same subject, from the same journal issue, etc.

Revised English Abstracts

While French publishers generally provide English translations of their abstracts, that is not always enough. In order to meet the standards of academic English, we systematically assess the quality of the content.

We perform a rigorous evaluation of all abstracts in English submitted for Cairn.info and rewriting work is undertaken whenever necessary to improve the quality of the language.
